VANCOUVER, Oct. 12.—A verdict of not guilty was returned by the jury at the assize court this afternoon before Mr. Justice Gregory, in the case of Walter Mottishaw, charged with attempted murder of Leonard Love. According to the evidence, Mottishaw's wife had left him and their two small children for Love. Accused went to Love's apartment, it was declared, and after a few words pulled

NOT PROPER, SAYS FINANCE MINISTER

MARITIME REPORT SHOULD NOT BE MADE PUBLIC, HE SAYS, UNTIL SESSION

St. John Board Wants to Know Why Mr. Calder Is Making Parts of It Public in Speech

OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—The Government has decided that the Andrew Rae-Duncan report on the claims and rights of the Maritime Provinces should not be made public until it has been tabled on the floor of the House of Commons.

Acting Premier Robb today wrote to Maritime Conservatives in answer to a resolution which they adopted at a special meeting here yesterday. The resolution demanded the immediate publication of the report. Mr. Robb has replied that the Maritime commission inquiry was authorized under Act of Parliament, that the expenses of the commission were voted by Parliament, and that the Government considers the proper procedure is to release the report for publication only when it is tabled in the House of Commons.

Mr. Calder's Speech
 In answer to the Saint John Board of Trade, which telegraphed Mr. Robb to know if Mr. R. L. Calder, K.C., one of the Customs probe counsel, was authorized to discuss the Duncan report in a public speech, Mr. Robb has replied that the Government has authorized nobody to publish any part of the report, and that his attention has not been drawn to any public reference by Mr. Calder to the Maritime report. He adds that the report was handed in to the former Government on the eve of its departure from office, and that the present Government had not had time to consider it properly.

In a speech at Montreal, unfriendly to the claims of the Maritime Provinces, Mr. Calder referred to certain alleged facts as having been ascertained as a result of the Duncan inquiry. Taken together with the statement that the Government does not think it proper to make public the contents of the report prior to the meeting of Parliament, this has led to the inquiry of the Saint John Board of Trade.

Queen Marie Sails On Steamship Leviathan

ON BOARD SS. LEVIATHAN, Oct. 12.—Queen Marie of Rumania, bound for the new world, boarded the Leviathan at Cherbourg tonight to the music of the Rumanian anthem and was welcomed by Captain Hartley commander of the fleet, his staff and the entire crew.

It was raining when the tender Welcome approached the steamer, but the Queen stood unprotected on the open deck that she might get the full effect of the brilliant lighted sky-scaper of the sea as she stood out-lined against the murky heavens. Shortly after the Leviathan raised anchor and started for America into rough seas.

Vancover Liberals Want New Voters' List

VANCOUVER, Oct. 12.—Suggestion that provision be made in the Provincial Elections Act for periodic cancellation of the entire voters' list and requiring all voters to register anew was made at tonight's meeting of the Vancouver Liberal executive. The present automatic striking off of names of those who do not exercise their franchise disposes of dead people, but does not purge the list of those who move away, it was contended.

Court Decides Today On Robert Scott Case

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—Closing chapters of Russell Scott's case to escape the gallows are expected to be written at Springfield tomorrow morning when the Supreme Court will act on a motion by Scott's attorney for a writ of error to halt the execution set for Friday morning. Scott has many times escaped the noose for the slaying two and a half years ago of a drug clerk in a holdup, and tonight he declared that if the State Supreme Court rules adversely, he hopes to have his case taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Fire Set to Building In British Compound

TOKIO, Oct. 12.—An attempt was made by some unidentified persons early today to set fire to a storage building in the British embassy compound. Oil soaked rags were used to start the blaze. Scott was discovered and put out quickly, the damage being slight. There is no significance attached to the incident, police believing it was the act of a workman with a personal grudge, but the matter was reported to the Foreign Office by an embassy official who said he considered the matter trivial.

Lady Dimsdale Dies After Taking Poison

LONDON, Oct. 12.—"Suicide while of sound mind" was the coroner's verdict today in the case of Lady Elizabeth Dimsdale, who died recently in a London hotel after taking poison.

She was the widow of Sir J. Dimsdale, son of a former Lord Mayor of London. Sir John took his own life by shooting in 1923. Later in the same year, Lady Elizabeth was charged with attempting suicide by drowning.

Makes Suggestion Which Would Lessen Electrolysis Loss

THE heavy damages to city water mains by electrolysis have drawn attention to the influence which radio may have on the question. It is pointed out by Mr. G. H. Grant, the president of the Victoria Radio Club, that the effect of reporting radio interference to the inspector or the club officials may result immediately in prompt bonding of the street railway tracks and the company may thereby be saved large sums of money in damages through the pitting of water mains.

Mr. Guthrie Confers With Former Leader

OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—The new Conservative House leader and the former Conservative chief today discussed in camera matters incidental to the welfare of the Opposition party. For over an hour, Hon. Hugh Guthrie, elected as Conservative leader at yesterday's caucus of the party, and Mr. Meighen, whose resignation as leader was accepted at the same meeting, conferred in the office of the leader of the official Opposition. The conference marked the taking over of the duties of the Conservative House leader by Mr. Guthrie, and Mr. Meighen's farewell to the work which has been his as party chief for the past six years.

Toronto Cannot Get Much Alberta Coal

TORONTO, Oct. 12.—The Ontario Fuel Comptroller today announced that Toronto will not get any quantity of Alberta coal delivered at $11 a ton. The city is ordering coke to tide things over.

A man was spending a holiday in a city for the first time. Walking through a fashionable street he noticed on a door the words, "Please ring the bell." He rang the bell. In a minute a servant appeared and asked him what he wanted.

"Nothing," said the man.

"Then why did you ring the bell?" asked the servant.

"Because it said so," replied the man.

"Oh," said the servant. "I see you come from the country where goats grow on bushes."

"Yes," said the man, "but in the city there are more wonderful things. You have only to ring the bell and a monkey pops out."

EXPEDITIONS RACE FOR CHINA DRAGONS

New Yorkers on Route to Orient to Bag Terrifying Specimens for Zoological Gardens

SEATTLE, Oct. 12.—Specimens of real, live, man-eating dragons, thirty feet long, scales, yard-long tongue, "in everythin'" are to be captured and brought to American zoological gardens in the near future, if—

Indeed there are several "ifs." Authentic reports from Oriental travelers who have just arrived in Seattle on the A.O.L. President Grant are to the effect that on the island of Komoda, in the Sunda Sea, between Flores and Sumatra and approximately 400 miles southeast of Borneo, such "animals" exist. Two expeditions are now racing to Komoda, one led by Mr. Jesse Metcalf and the other by Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Burden, all of New York City. Mrs. Burden is going to try and take moving pictures of the monsters and so eclipse Conan Doyle's "The Lost World."

The creatures are supposed to be the last descendants of a tribe of giant lizards which lived in the long ago and traveled the old land bridge into China, where they filled the early Chinese with terror and pervaded Chinese mythology with dragon lore. Like the robber barons of yore these survivors live up aloft in the hills where nothing can approach them without being seen. They can travel as fast as an automobile, are practically impervious to high power bullets and are absolutely fearless. They hunt in parties of a dozen or more, and as there are no trees on the island the only safe way for a human being to go after the big ones would be in an armored car or a tank.

Paris Families Live in 300-Year-Old House

PARIS, Oct. 12.—Seven families living in a decrepit, worm-eaten house more than 300 years old, which was condemned by the city architects many months ago, are forced to stay there because the housing shortage is so great that there is no place to go.

Drug Bill Is Source Of Worry To British

LONDON, Oct. 12.—More than £2,000,000 a year is spent on drugs in this country, says Sir Walter Kinners, controller of the insurance department of the Ministry of Health, and that is one of the most disheartening things in connection with the administration of the insurance act.

Mr. Simpkins is a great enthusiast on the subject of "chest protectors," which he recommends to people on every occasion.

"A great thing!" he says. "They make people more healthy, increase their strength, and lengthen their lives."

"But—what about our ancestors?" someone asked. "They didn't have any chest protectors, did they?"

"They did not," said Mr. Simpkins triumphantly. "And where are they now? All dead!"

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—American travelers, unaccustomed to sleeping on feather beds with wedged-shaped bolsters beneath their pillows, have described the first night in a German hotel as a struggle to escape suffocation. A Berlin hotel is now supplying guests with cards upon which are described half a dozen ways of making up a bed. If an American wants to sleep in American style, he checks the proper diagram on the card and leaves it to the chambermaid to do the rest.

PERJURY ALLEGED IN COURT ACTION

TRIAL OF REX VS. GREEN OPENS BEFORE JUDGE BARKER IN COUNTY COURT

Question of Interest Which Defendant Had in Logging Company Forms Crux of Matter

After some preliminary motions the trial in Rex vs. J. R. Green was started yesterday, and will be continued in the County Court this morning before Judge Barker, of Nanaimo, who is conducting the proceedings at the request of Judge Lampman, a witness in the case. The charge is one of perjury, and arises out of a previous trial, that of MacEwan vs. Green, which was heard by Judge Lampman in September, 1924. This latter action had relation to the Cobble Hill Logging Company, which was incorporated in 1922, Mr. Green acting as solicitor.

The alleged perjury was based on evidence given by Mr. Green at the trial to the effect that he had not been a shareholder or a director of the logging company, and had acted only in the capacity of solicitor for the company.

The proceedings yesterday as far as the Crown proceeded, with Mr. J. B. Clearhue acting as solicitor, were directed in an effort to show that

Accidental Death Is Jury's Verdict; Driver Exonerated

A VERDICT of "Accidental death" was brought in by the coroner's jury at the inquest on the death of Master James Vickers Tickle, who died in the St. Joseph's Hospital on Sunday following an accident last Friday. Mr. William Brown, the driver of the car that struck the boy down, was exonerated of all blame. It was testified that the boy riding a bicycle, had darted out from St. James Street on the left into Oswego Street and had attempted to cut the corner in front of the car. This had resulted in his crashing into the front part of the car driven by Mr. Brown.

While this statement had been made in the court proceedings, Mr. Green had affirmed his signature to bank documents in which he appeared as director.

Offers Explanation

On the other side, Mr. D. S. Tait, who appears for Mr. Green, explained the situation connected with the signatures which appeared on various papers connected with banking, by showing that, while the defendant very often signed either "pro director" or "p director," the absence of "pro" or "p" following his name and before the word director, might be simply a matter of habit, or neglect to take care that the formality was respected.

It was pointed out by Mr. Tait that in any event the paper had passed the scrutiny of bank officials without evident protest.

When the proceedings opened yesterday morning, Mr. Clearhue endeavored to amend the claim by interjecting further particulars with respect to the charge.

Mr. Tait took objection at once to the proposed amendments, suggested to be read into the statement of the offence alleged. He said that the Crown must be explicit in the nature of the proposals made by way of amendment were not in keeping with the practice in matters of this kind.

Must Be Exact

In a perjury case the exact offence must be set out. It must be pointed out exactly what was alleged to be untrue in the statement made.

The court agreed that the amendments went, perhaps, too far when it was proposed to add to the statement that had been originally objected to, namely, that Mr. Green was never a shareholder nor a director of the logging company and had been only a solicitor for the company. The addition of the words "having no interest in said company," the court felt, went considerably beyond the original statement. His Honor said he did not know whether this would mean proprietary interest or interest as a creditor.

The court agreed, however, that the Crown was entitled to amendment.

Mr. Clearhue thereupon asked for adjournment until the afternoon to prepare the amendments in keeping with the opinion of the court. This was granted.

Mr. Tait gave warning that he would object again to anything that went outside of the purview of the language used by the defendant, and which was complained of.

Makes Amendments

When the court assembled in the afternoon Mr. Clearhue had his amendments ready. He proposed, he said, to set out the various interests in detail which the defendant had in the logging company and which it was proposed to prove. He therefore alleged in the amendment submitted that Mr. Green had been and was a shareholder in the company, and a director, that he was a director, that he was treasurer, that he was secretary, that he was manager, and, in fact, was owner and controller of the company.

Mr. Tait took the ground that the amendment which was now suggested had many vices that were not to be found in the original proposal. He said that the Crown previously had put in evidence to show that Mr. Green had been neither a shareholder nor a director. Now a word had been suggested as to secretary or treasurer. This was getting into the realm of bad faith, he contended, on the part of the Crown, when things were introduced that did not appear in the depositions.

Charges Fishing Expedition

The proposition now made was really a glorified fishing expedition so that, if by good luck anything was got 10 corns removed after three Radox footbaths

The great value of Radox for removing corns bodily is not only that Radox enables the corn to be lifted out root and all, but also that the treatment is absolutely painless; no cutting, no cauterizing, no bleeding, no risk whatever of blood poisoning—just a footbath in hot antiseptic oxygenated water and the corn may be lifted out. Read this letter:

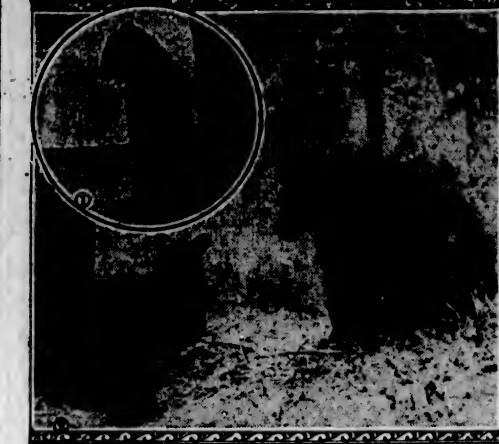

"I had five corns (not callouses) on each foot, and after using Radox Bath Salts as directed for three nights in succession, I was able to walk in perfect comfort. I managed to get the last of my corns right out after the third bath in Radox. Have still got some of the first packet. Can honestly say I had spent dollars on different 'patents,' but nothing but Radox had the desired effect."

When you put your feet into a footbath containing Radox, the salts soften the hard outer layers of the corn and the dead skin (of the corn) combines with the Radox Bath Salts to form a protein salt of the actual corn itself. This dissolves in the water and so loosens the corn that it can be lifted out bodily.

On your way home to-night buy a package at the drugists.

Mother Bear Teaches Cub Unselfishness

(1) Bear Cub Stepping Out. (2) Black Bear Family in Native Haunt

IT'S a "rifty-rifty" proposition with Canadian black bear, the most popular wild animals in the parks of the Canadian Rockies. They have not repeated man's intrusion but instead have exhibited an ever-increasing curiosity about man's affairs. In the vicinity of Banff and Lake Louise they have become so tame that it is a common sight to see them amble across the roads, and even stop for a sign of recognition from the tourists.

An English lady was visiting Chateau Lake Louise, in the Canadian Rockies, and desired above all else to see a bear. She chose a likely spot and waited and waited, but in vain.

Later, when out on a stroll, she came upon a belpoth with a bottle of milk. She watched without making her presence known. Soon a bear appeared with two cubs. The boy approached fearlessly, took the top from the bottle and gave the cub a drink. When, however, he tried to take the bottle away in order to share it with the other cub, the cub refused. The mother bear asserted her authority and gave the obstreperous cub a wallop. This settled the dispute, and only demonstrated one of the many almost human instincts of the black bear.

FEDERATION OF LABOR DENOUNCES SOVIETISM

United States Convention Describes Russian Regime as Assassin of Freedom

DETROIT, Oct. 12.—Two resolutions urging modification of the United States immigration laws to permit admission of aliens seeking refuge from "political and religious persecution" were rejected after a heated debate today by the American Federation of Labor at its annual convention here.

Two resolutions denouncing citizens' military training camps as militaristic were rejected by the convention in favor of the expression contained in the executive council's report that "it would be advantageous to all of the boys of our country to take advantage of the opportunities afforded them in these camps."

Sorry for Russia

Characterizing the Soviet regime in Russia as "the assassin standing over the prostrate body of freedom and democracy," the American Federation of Labor at its annual convention here today renewed its pledge to give no quarter "to that regime of enslavement" or its friends and sympathizers in America.

Reporting a resolution advocating diplomatic recognition of Russia by the United States Government, the convention's committee on resolutions expressed "full agreement with President Coolidge in holding United States principles are not to be bartered," frowned upon a proposed labor commission of investigation in Russia and extended "profound sympathy to the masses of the people of Russia in their moral, political and spiritual enslavement."

"We regard the Soviet regime as the most unscrupulous, most anti-social, most menacing institution in the world today," the report said.

On Way to Hospital Man Shoots Himself

WINNIPEG, Oct. 12.—Werner Preinig, a native of Switzerland, arriving here from Port Arthur, Ont., a few days ago, died in hospital here today, the victim of a self-inflicted wound.

Hiring a taxi at the railway station he asked to be driven to the hospital. While on the way he shot himself with a revolver.

Nicola Rancher Suicided

MERRITT, B.C., Oct. 12.—Evidence given during a coroner's inquest on the death of Nicola rancher, found dead beside his horse in a hole after being missing since August 17, resulted in a verdict "that he came to his death by his own hands while in a state of mental depression."

Witnesses stated that after shooting his horse McAvoy evidently placed the muzzle of his gun into his mouth and blew the top of his head off.

Injured Lad Unconscious

VANCOUVER, Oct. 13.—Lawellyn Kibbina, six, was reported by General Hospital authorities this morning to be still in an unconscious condition.

He suffered critical injury to the head when knocked down by an automobile driven by Mrs. D. C. McEwan, of New Westminster, on Saturday evening.

SPEAKER OUTLINES KIWANIS PRINCIPLE

Honesty, Friendship and Service Are Ethical for Business Men, Says Mr. G. J. A. Reany

Ethics and honesty, friendship and service were the basic principles of Kiwanis, Mr. G. J. A. Reany, past president of the Edmonton Kiwanis Club, said in his address at the weekly luncheon of the Victoria organization yesterday. He selected business ethics for special examination.

Advancement of these ethics had been left to the church in the past, Mr. Reany said, but the church could only uphold these principles as desirable. This was its work and it was as far as the church could go. It was up to every business man to apply these ethics in his work.

"The city that is not built upon a foundation of honest citizenry cannot live," he said, after referring to the destruction of Sodom, because of lack of even ten good men.

"A nation that is not conducting its affairs on an ethical basis must perish, a city which is not built by a moral citizenry will fall," he said.

Mr. Thomas Kelway rendered two solos during the luncheon.

CONSERVATIVE LEADERSHIP

Mr. Hugh Guthrie, who is to lead the Conservative Party in the House of Commons during the coming session, undoubtedly won the position because of his ability in debate and his personal popularity. The question of a successor to Mr. Arthur Meighen as the leader of the Conservatives has been left open until a national convention is held. There is wisdom in this course for it is conceivable that Monday's conference at Ottawa might have made a choice which would not have been acceptable to the country as a whole. In any case the decision on ultimate leadership is a matter for consideration over a period of some months and it should be, as is intended, left in the hands of a convention consisting of country-wide selected delegates representative of the party.

It is the course of the next session of Parliament that will exercise considerable sway on the choice of a leader. The ability of Mr. Guthrie is well known; his skill as a parliamentarian is widely recognized. In accepting the leadership in the House of Commons he enters upon a task in which he will be highly tested and if he emerges from that test with flying colors he will prove a strong contender for the ultimate leadership, that is always supposed that he would be willing to accept such responsibility. It must be recalled, however, that there are those outside the ranks of the House of Commons who, by virtue of their position in the affairs of the Dominion, appear admirably equipped for political leadership.

ASSESSMENT INCREASES

A meeting is to be held this evening at the instance of the Real Estate Exchange to which certain property owners interested have been invited with the object of discussing the City Council's action in raising the assessments of properties in and near the business district. The properties involved are on Yates, Blanshard, View, Quadra, Johnson, Vancouver, Meares, Fort and Douglas Streets. The increases noted were not decided on when the regular assessment notices were sent to owners. The idea of increasing the assessments seems to have been an afterthought. It was not the idea of the City Assessor so far as we can ascertain, but of a committee of the City Council. That committee has not advanced reasons which show that there is any wisdom in its course.

At a time when there is a general belief that conditions in this municipality are on the mend it is poor policy for the City Council to increase tax burdens in any direction, even though the total increase involved is only $5,720.75. It took years, after the real estate boom of pre-war days to bring down the assessments of property to within measurable distance of their actual value. As those reductions were effected the owners showed more and more of a disposition to meet their tax obligations rather than allow their properties to revert to the municipality. The city is still considerably short of collecting the amount of taxes on land that it levies and until it is able to collect at least ninety-five per cent of all taxes on the land and on improvements as well it is not good policy to raise the value of assessments.

If it may be presumed that the level of assessment as applied to business, semi-business and residential properties is a fair one, then it should follow that if there are justifiable reasons for raising assessments they apply all round, or, in other words, that there should be an upward movement of assessed values. The city authorities evidently do not believe that conditions warrant such a general upward trend. We would ask, therefore, upon what grounds special discrimination is being shown against properties in the area that has been defined. We know of no conditions which warrant the increase in assessed values in that area. The owners themselves, or very many of them, consider their taxes have been too high for years past and they can show that they have been too high on the basis of the rental returns which they are able to secure. Now, with increased assessments, there will be increased taxation, and just at a time when the city authorities have been priding themselves upon having effected a slight reduction in the general level of taxation imposed for municipal purposes.

The property owners intend to protest vigorously against such assessment increases at this time and it is possible that they will have the substantial backing of the Real Estate Exchange as a body. On its part the City Council should be willing to admit that it has made a mistake and one that, if persisted in, would act as a deterrent to civic progress. It should be the duty of the city authorities to foster not to weaken the spirit of confidence that has been aroused by a policy of taxation reduction. That spirit will most certainly not be fostered by taxation increases. The marvel to us is that the step involving the properties on the streets mentioned should have been decided upon with apparently so little discussion and without taking into consideration at all the implications of raising taxation in any direction at this time.

INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE

There must be a tremendous volume of public opinion in favor of English, as opposed to Esperanto or Ido, being made the international language. As it is now English is more evenly distributed all over the world than any other language. It is questionable if Esperanto has made any real strides in public popularity since it was first used. It is not an international language because it is not used for the purposes of diplomacy, trade or social intercourse. Mr. W. R. Rickmers, of Bremen, Germany, once a staunch advocate of its use, believes now that it is a "dead" language which would have to be "revived." He says it would need an academy of pronunciation. The number of its teachers is too small and there are very few who speak it fluently, while there are far too many who don't speak it at all. Its literature is scanty, and, in short, as Mr. Rickmers says, it is not a living and life-inspiring organism, being more like algebra.

As opposed to the claims made on behalf of Esperanto Mr. Rickmers points to English as a body of living logic which is written and spoken fluently by millions of people from whom one can learn it. He says the English grammar is easy and that the mispronunciations by foreigners are not worse than the differences between Cockney, Scottish and American. He says even pidgin-English can be understood. Moreover, in connection with English, there is an enormous literature in the shape of books, periodicals, and business correspondence readily available for study. A score of arguments supporting the English language could be built up for each one in favor of Esperanto as a vehicle for communication between the nations.

GERMAN POLICY

Dr. Gustav Stresemann, Germany's Foreign Minister and her chief representative at the League of Nations meeting, has made clear what Germany's aims will be as a member of the League. He interprets Germany's inclusion in the League as a sign that the spirit of the Treaty of Versailles has been finally abandoned. He reads into this inclusion a recantation by the Allies of the moral stigma placed upon Germany. It is obvious that Germany is to use her League membership to recover what she lost through her defeat in the Great War. Dr. Stresemann, however, makes it clear that the German delegation has no intention of making an assault upon the League by rushing in with a list of demands. What she will aim at is the recovery step by step of what she has lost.

Expert commentators on the situation believe that the whole face of the League has been changed by the admission of Germany and they are inclined to believe, too, that material results will accrue to Germany. That country is playing a waiting game. She will not open an offensive immediately. Dr. Stresemann has outlined her policy which is to be gradually developed within the League, an instrument which Germany hopes she can utilize to enable her to regain her pre-war status in Europe and eventually to escape from the obligations imposed upon her both by the Treaty of Versailles and the Dawes reparation plan.

A FLAG ISSUE

General Hertzog, before leaving South Africa to attend the Imperial Conference, issued a statement about the controversial Flag Bill. This was to the effect that if it was passed next year by Parliament in its revised form it would not come into operation until approved by a referendum of the electorate. That is a concession on the vexed question, but a doubtful one, for a referendum on such a subject would arouse the bitterest of feelings. The question of a flag is essentially a patriotic one which should be approved by the people as a whole, not adopted by a majority with a substantial minority opposed to it. The Government of South Africa knows it is on unsafe ground and hence its repeated concessions to public opinion.

At the present time the Government of South Africa is endeavoring to constitute a non-political commission to evolve a new flag design. There is a stipulation that in this design the Union Jack and the old Transvaal and Free State flags must have no place. Prominent citizens who have been asked to act on the commission have refused. Now General Hertzog promises a referendum in the hope that this will obviate the difficulties in the way of appointing a commission. In the meantime the argument persists that it is better to drop the flag question altogether until such time, if ever, as there is national unanimity on the subject.

In the United States there is seemingly an aversion to passing laws against the possession of firearms. This aversion, however, should not apply to the possession of machine guns which seem to be the weapons now used in fighting the law on the streets of Chicago and New York.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

Now that the sun has almost completed his Summer's work, lazily and seeks his rest at an untimely hour in the evenings, the melancholy days may be said to be upon us. The Dominion elections are over (and the least said about them the better). Premier King is on his way to London to attend the Imperial Conference, carrying his pet blanket with him for the purpose of stifling any suggestions of Imperial importance that may be submitted to the conference.

The test cricket match between England and Australia has been fought and won, and the "mythical ashes" repose in a mythical urn in the Pavilion at the Oval. The test baseball match for the Championship of the World also has been fought and won, and for the first time in the history of the world the championship pennant will flutter in the languorous breezes or be torn to tatters in the raging tornadoes of the Sunny South. The great "Babe" Ruth has demonstrated that he is not a "dud" by hammering out four or more home runs in a championship series, something that never had been done before and probably never will be done again.

Bobby Jones, another mighty swifter with clubs, has won the golf championship of Great Britain, and has been compelled to lower his colors to George von Elm, also of the United States. The most brilliant of all lawn tennis luminaries, the immortal Suzanne Lenglen, has become a professional tennis player, and has collected a considerable number of less brilliant stars and pinned them to her train, and lawn tennis in the United States will become even as baseball a money-making professional sport. Where the money is, there will the stars of professional sport be gathered together. That is something that might be written of many other sports as well as of baseball and lawn tennis. Our neighbors delight in amusements of all kinds. They delight particularly in sports which are purely physical in their appeal, and are willing to pay liberally, even handsomely, for their entertainment.

A highly cultured gentleman named Jack Dempsey, naturally a scowling and ferocious looking professor of "the noble art of self-defence," who increased the natural truculence of his face by cultivating a stubble of bristles before he entered the "ring," glared at his opponents and proceeded to batter them into "the land of dreams," no longer sits upon the throne of the mighty and proclaims himself champion pugilist of the world. A comparatively mid-looking fellow named Tunney reigns in his stead. Some of the sporting gentlemen of the United States attribute Jack's decisive but not ignominious defeat to an indiscretion. They say that Jack, like Samson, would not have shaved off his hair—that without his ferocious-looking bristles he looked even as an ordinary man, and that the scowling features which once paralyzed the heart and the muscles of his opponents failed to terrify Tunney. The most interesting feature of this ingenious theory is not the effect of an indiscretion upon the fortunes of Dempsey but the inference to be drawn from it that the gentlemen of the sporting world are more or less familiar with some of the incidents related in the Scriptures even if they are not thoroughly familiar with the literature of the Scriptures.

Of course the combat between Dempsey and Tunney was the classical sporting event of the year. It attracted a great concourse of people from the United States and Canada, and doubtless quite a number of people from other parts of the world. That great multitude contributed handsomely from their pockets to the pockets of all the people who entered them. If Dempsey suffered cruel indignities from the muffled hands of his adversary, if the features which more than once had been specially used for the purpose of producing a bountiful crop of ferocious-looking bristles, at the conclusion of the battle were adorned in quite a different manner, if they were hampered and belted like a tough and leathery beefsteak, there were compensations annexed to the glorious exhibition. Dempsey staggered from the "ring" with a big sack of money on his back, all contributed by the sporting people who are interested in the noble art of self-defence.

On the whole, however, the melancholy days of Autumn and the dreary days of Winter need not be so very melancholy after all for the amusement-loving people of the United States and Canada. Those of us who become tired reading about the achievements of the tennis players, the hockey players, or the prizefighters, can watch the proceedings in the very interesting case of Mrs. Aimee McPherson vs. the State of California. We suspect that that sensational case, like the sensational case of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce, will not be settled in a hurry, and that when it is settled it will be settled in a very different way from the case of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce. Those who are not interested in sport can fix their thoughts upon the Congressional election in the United States or upon the proceedings of the British Imperial Conference.

Those who are interested in music will welcome the announcement that jazz has about run its crazy course and will be succeeded by the dreamy, soothing waltz for the purposes of the dance.

Freight Rates Basis

From The Montreal Gazette
Transportation charges are a perennial subject of debate. When other objects of attack fail, the political demagogue can always take a crack at the railways; and he does so quite frequently. As a poster for popular support, he feels that he is appealing to a more or less general prejudice, for freight tolls, like customs duties, are not paid cheerfully. To the shipper they are always high. No one ever heard them described as low, although the railways themselves have often had a different story to tell. Few people have paused to consider in a judicial spirit the basis of freight rates, and, if they did, they would search in vain for anything in the nature of an analogy to the rules which regulate other prices. For example, the law of supply and demand, so broad and almost universal in its application, has no place in the matter. It would not work. Something having more elasticity is required, and the best that can be said is that the existing classification of commodities, with a specific rate for each class, has unavoidably been a thing of synthesis rather than a thing of analysis.

Traffic conditions are the controlling factor in fixing a freight rate. This may seem both illogical and unjust, but only to those who have not looked into the matter with an open mind. It has been believed to be unjust by the layman, because it is usually described as meaning "all the traffic will bear," but that is neither the purpose of the rule nor its effect. When looked at dispassionately, and in the light of transportation development, it is not only economically sound, but is also an exceedingly complex situation. Theoretically, each commodity should pay the cost of its own transportation, but in practice, plus a reasonable addition for profit on operation—a return on capital investment. But if that were tried it would completely disrupt our scheme of things. It would mean the paying of as much for hauling a ton of coal, or a ton of wheat, as a ton of jewelry. The traffic would not bear such haphazard inequalities, and therefore nothing of that nature is tried. Moreover, there are many other considerations which come into the equation, and they all have a vital part to play in the final result. The much misinterpreted basis of tolls was not adopted to help the railways, but to serve the common good; and, all things considered, it does that quite effectively.

British Columbia's Case
Popular feeling in this matter of freight rates is always sensitive to even the suspicion of discrimination, or between either localities or commodities. When, however, the matter is examined in a dispassionate way, it often happens that there are factors at work which are not seen on the surface. For example, all railway economists are now agreed that distance alone should not be a decisive factor in fixing a toll. It costs more to haul a given number of tons over a mountain section than over a section having favorable grades and favorable operating conditions. That much should be obvious. Furthermore, the cost of a ton of freight in a mountain section is much greater than in a prairie section. In such a situation, the question arises as to whether the costly section should be made to contribute its share to the rates be uniform over all sections. If the latter course is followed, there is complaint from the railways on the score of injustice. If the former, then the shippers using the more costly section, looking at the rates in other sections, clamor for equality. That happens to be, in a nutshell, the British Columbia case which the Railway Commission is at this moment investigating, and for the third or fourth time.

In all the leading countries of the world, the railways regulate the rates of transportation rates. Canada adopted that policy in 1902, and set up the Railway Commission. This meant the substitution of judicial control, and provided the machinery for justice to the shipper, on one hand, and justice to the carrier on the other. For more than twenty years this tribunal has permitted to exercise its wisely-weighed powers, and thereby to universal contentment. Then something significant and baneful happened. That something was the resurrection of the dead and forgotten Crow's Nest Pass agreement of 1897, and the action of the King Government in grafting that agreement upon the rate structure for all time to come. In other words, in order to placate his agrarian supporters, by whose grace alone he held office, Mr. King allowed the deal of a blow at the integrity of the Railway Commission and return to political control in the matter of freight rates. That was but a single example of what it cost Canada to keep a minority Government in power at Ottawa.

FLOWERS

Flowers, flowers, beautiful flowers,
Fed by the sunshine and watered by showers,
Surpassing the regal robe of kings
Showing God's glory in earthly things;
Breathing life to the sick and weary
In pain,
Telling of joy in their future again.
When their Winter is past and Summer draws nigh
And flowers in their beauty gladden the eye.

Flowers for the bride on her wedding day,
Flowers on the grave where our loved ones lay;
Flowers growing in Heaven until the morn
Of the glorious Easter Day shall dawn.
Our flowers dead upon earth transplanted to Heaven
Shall tell to our loved ones again
No more to be parted by sorrow or death.
United forever by heavenly breath;

Bound by the cords of infinite love,
Held and sustained by our Father
Oh, thank God for the flowers,
The beautiful flowers,
Fed by the sunshine and watered by showers.

Speed on Nanaimo Roads

Sir,—I desire to protest through the medium of your columns against the careless driving of one of the drivers employed by a stage line known as the Flying Line. Yesterday afternoon at about 3:30 I was parked outside Hamlettery Lakeside, clean off the driving surface, when the stage from Sidney came flying round the curve at about thirty-five miles per hour, narrowly missing a motorist coming in the opposite direction and nearly forcing him off the road. In avoiding the other car the stage swerved over to the right of the road and missed my parked car by a matter of inches. I would not take exception to this case if it were not for the fact that I have observed the same carelessness manifested by the driver of this stage on previous occasions. Everytime I have met him on the Sidney run I have been forced off the driving surface by his apparent desire to "hog" the road. It must not be known to the driver of this car that extra care should be taken in taking the curve round Hamlettery Lakeside. There are always a number of cars parked there and people are continuously crossing the road at that point. I do not see why the why stage drivers are allowed to run at such an excessive rate of speed. Taking into consideration the number of lives in the hands of these drivers it appears to me that public vehicles should be made to observe the laws to the letter.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I have heard complaints from other motorists concerning the above mentioned stage and trust that this letter will be the means of making the roads safer for others.

The Woolen Industry

Sir,—To the "strangers within the gates" of the city of Victoria, the letter over the name of Alderman J. A. Shanks will be read with great interest. But as a citizen I would like to ask in this the same woolen industry we have heard so much of during the past years. If this is so, there are many who would be interested to know if Ald. Harvey agrees that nothing can be done unless the private interests of the city get together the small sum of $200,000?

One would gather from the tone of Ald. Shanks' letter that he thinks it is time for him to get busy. Another question of interest, what about the great scheme Alderman Shanks talked about some years ago, the staging of moving pictures on Vancouver Island? Has that scheme quite another $200,000 from private interest?

It is getting close to election day. Would it not be well if the voters can get some data on these two pet schemes and so have an opportunity of voting intelligently. Ald. Shanks states, "All we need in getting guaranteed financial support and then, very soon, the smoke stacks of a woolen factory, etc." I would suggest that electrical energy would be a better support than now in the twentieth century. As far as industries go it would appear we shall still have to sing:

A few more years shall roll,
A few more seasons come,
And we shall be with those at rest
Asleep within the tomb.

No doubt the Aldermen will enlighten us.

The English

Sir,—Myself, I don't want to see any change in the characteristics of the English people, because I feel certain that when I do, somebody will call me up to tell that the soul of Shakespeare no longer exists; and that, from now on, it will be necessary to make a noise at least once a year, so as to let the world know that the fact that Shakespeare ever lived at all. I may also be told that the unobtrusiveness which is the perfection of good taste must go, and that now the English must scream aloud their virtues, and as to their being unlike anybody else.

The only complaint I wish to make, is that the longer I live, the more I realize how difficult it is to assimilate that wide, seasoned vintage of a fruitful past given by the people of the Old Land in so short a time as the average life.

Hundreds of years ago, the monks in their monasteries were so busy giving the English a "write up" on rolls of parchment that the records seldom remembered to change their shirts. Today, it is whispered that few Englishmen have any shirts to change. Since, however, the invention of the printing machine, and the manufacture of paper, the virtues of the race are so widely known that everyone takes them as a matter of course.

Nowadays, noted English are so common that you seldom meet people who can remember when there was actually simple folk like the writer. In fact, so easy does it seem to go on meeting them, it puts me in a happy mood to occasionally hear of others. The first essential for greatness, it would seem, is to go on being great and don't make a noise about it. Fortunately for the race as a whole, few wandering lecturers have influenced English history or changed their enviable tradition. If ever you write a book, and you are going to make the hero in it an Englishman, perchance, you should discover half his ancestors were Irish, well, kindly let the other half down gently.

And after all, what with alms, mystics, poets, philosophers, historians, scientists and cricket, life can be made bearable for the English people. Some people claim to have reached their destiny through the medium of strong drink, while others are proving that the lack of it will be their guiding light. Others, happily, appreciate the good old Motherland for the fine influence she has had on the world. Some friends of mine regularly hold the "fragrant weed," and swear by Sir Walter Raleigh. There are so many channels of influence created by that race, it doesn't seem to matter what you do, or say, you have to put up with 'em.

However, the texture of the human brain is considered peculiarly flexible, so all good things will get there in time. One method for discovery of the greatest poet is to read all poets. Then if you would like to, know something about Arabia, or anywhere else for that matter, why, history is the recipe, providing it is a good one.

The investigator might venture to assent, or dissent, with the works of modern men of letters, and may, or may not, revel in Brooke, Spenser, Flecker, De la Mare, and Massfield. Some seek Reason. Others say he's a bit queer; nevertheless, Elliot seems quite sincere. Blunden helps, and D. H. Lawrence writes rather well. Many have found complete happiness in the ever rising, if mournful, star of Hardy, and those two perfect lyrics, Watson and Bridges, who are with us yet. On the other hand, if "adventure" is your cry, well, you know as much about the Great War as I do.

When you leave that joyous band of Englishmen, there's nothing to prevent you from making biology your recreation. Then, if you should happen on a "strain" which is not Anglo-Saxon, well, life being full of "ups and downs," few will murmur if you scream your findings from the roofs of their houses. After all in such a democratic country as ours, where the Premier does as he likes, no one will interfere, and it is possible to borrow a permit if you need a drink.

The great thing evidently is not to appear great. But as soon as you lose interest in your people you are getting near the end. The showman's goods, however, are seldom worth the candle.

Anyrate, as a race there is still hope—so long as G. B. S., an Irishman, continues to enlighten us occasionally—and the U. B. C.

INQUEST WILL BE HELD ON THURSDAYMAN FOUND DEAD, HANGING BY THIN CORD FROM OAK TREE NEAR HOME*Late Mr. Greenwood Had Been Dependent Over Imaginary Financial Troubles

An inquest will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow on the death of Mr. Henry Greenwood, of Colwood, who was found dead yesterday morning, hanging from an oak tree some fifty yards from his home, opposite the Colwood Golf Club.

The late Mr. Greenwood was an old-time resident of Colwood, being a man of seventy years of age. He resided with his son-in-law, Mr. William Bradley. The deceased had for some time been dependent over hallucinative financial troubles.

Abandoning his usual practice of washing dishes after breakfast yesterday the deceased left the house at about 8:30 a.m. His daughter, Mrs. Bradley, noting the omission and his absence, made inquiries of her husband, who discovered his body hanging from the oak tree by a thin cord drawn tight around the neck.

Dr. D. Donald was called in and Provincial Constable Thompson took charge of the case. The body is now lying in state at the local funeral parlour.

TRUE BILLS ARE RETURNED HEREGRAND JURY RENDERS DECISIONS IN TWO CASES AT FALL ASSIZES*Case of Yamamoto, Charged With Murder, Traversed to Spring—Label Trial Proceeds

True bills were returned by the grand jury in the case of K. Yamamoto, charged with the murder of K. Takaguchi at Port Alice, Vancouver Island, and in the case of Mar Fur, accused of defamatory libel against Nip Sui Gim, a prepossessing young Chinese maid, at the opening of the Fall assizes at the local Court House, before Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald yesterday.

The case of Yamamoto was traversed to the Spring assizes, owing to the inability of the accused to stand trial at this time because of extreme ill-health. The request that the action be taken was made by Mr. A. J. Kappela, attorney for Yamamoto, and Mr. A. M. Johnson, K.C., crown counsel, said he would offer no objection to this course for he had been since his confinement, and was in a serious condition upon reaching Victoria from Okakura prison.

Yamamoto was charged with murder, it being alleged that as a result of an assault on T. Takaguchi, which is claimed to have taken place on October 16, 1925, at Port Alice, the latter came to his death. It was not until December 28, 1925, that the victim of the assault died, after being cared for during the intervening period at the Courtenay hospital.

Makes Second Postponement

Mr. Justice McDonald's order yesterday traversing the Yamamoto case to the Spring assizes marked the second postponement. In the murder hearing, the first having taken place at the recent Nanaimo assizes, when the accused was too ill to be placed on trial for the charge.

The other true bill returned by the grand jury was in the defamatory libel case which is a local one and concerns two Chinese residents of Victoria. The alleged libel is contained in certain letters which Mar Poy is charged with having written and which are alleged to reflect upon the moral character of the young lady, Nip Sui Gim.

This libel trial is not being conducted by the crown, the prosecution being handled as a private one. Mr. Frank Higgins, K.C., appears for the accused Mar Poy, while the private prosecution is being conducted by Mr. Richard C. Lowe.

Makes Favorable Comment

Mr. Justice McDonald commented favorably on the fact that Victoria had no case of great importance to present from its own police administration at the present assizes. His Lordship informed the grand jury that it could exercise its privilege of inspecting public buildings and institutions, if it so wished.

After the grand jury had returned its verdicts on the two cases considered, Mr. Alex. Peden, foreman of the jury, told His Lordship that the jury did not desire to make any inspection of public places at this assizes. The grand jury was then discharged.

The personnel of the grand jury was as follows: Messrs. Alex. Peden, foreman; Henry K. Anstie, Angus Campbell, Duval L. Gillespie, Robert Percy Knott, Alfred Kirk, Bert Roy Lemon, Harry Oard, Albert E.

Principals in Amazing McPherson Case

MORE than usual Canadian interest attaches to the preliminary hearing of the charges against Almee Semple McPherson at Los Angeles from the fact that she is a Canadian by birth, having lived till young womanhood near Ingersoll, Ontario. She is remembered as a remarkably handsome girl with wonderful copper-hued hair and a peach-bloom complexion. The man shown in the cut is Kenneth Ormiston, the elusive radio operator.

SCHOONER COLUMBIA
WINS SECOND RACE

Finishes Nearly Five Minutes Ahead of Henry Ford to Take Gloucester Fishing Fleet Honors

GLoucester, Mass., Oct. 12.—The swift schooner Columbia is champion of Gloucester's fishing fleet. The vessel won that title today when the expert seamanship of Capt. Ben Pine brought her home nearly five minutes ahead of the Henry Ford for her second straight victory in the series for the fishermen's championship. Today's triumph was even more decisive than that of yesterday, when the Ford crossed the finishing line one minute and four seconds behind the Columbia. The actual margin today was four minutes and forty-eight seconds. It was another battle of skippers and Ben Pine's astuteness in that game won him the Gloucester championship; a silver cup presented by George Fuller, of Worcester; a leg on a second cup presented by former Mayor Frank E. Davis, of Gloucester, for five years' competition; and a cash prize of $1,750. The Henry Ford received the second prize of $1,250.

The race was won and lost in windward work. On the third leg, a ten-mile beat to windward in uncertain air, Pine obtained the advantage that he held to the finish. When Capt. Clayton E. Morrisey, in the Ford, struck a soft spot and lay becalmed, Pine was able to "buy some wind" and make headway. At the third mark he had established a lead of ten minutes and thirty-one seconds and was out of danger for the day.

CRIMINAL LIBEL
TRIAL IS BEGUN

MAR POY PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO CHARGE AGAINST HIM IN ASSIZE COURT

Nip Sul Gim Says That Accused
Threatened to Take His Life
If He Were Deported

The trial of Mar Poy on a charge of criminal libel against Nip Sul Gim, a young Chinese girl, opened in the Assize Court yesterday before Mr. Justice McDonald, following the grand jury's returning of a true bill against the accused.

After the petit jury of twelve was picked, Clerk of the Court Oswald Barton read the charge against Mar Poy. It was to the effect that the accused did unlawfully publish a defamatory libel against Nip Sul Gim, knowing it to be false; that the libel was contained in a letter in Chinese characters written by Mar Poy and affecting Nip Sul Gim's moral character.

The accused entered a plea of not guilty, through an attorney, Mr. Frank Higgins, K.C.

Charged on Four Counts

Mr. Richard C. Lowe, who is conducting the private prosecution, in addressing the jury, said that Mar Poy was charged on four counts, namely, that the accused wrote a letter to Nip Sul Gim on May 14, and knew the same to be false; that he knew the letter alleged to contain the defamatory libel, irrespective of whether or not he knew it to be false; that the accused wrote a letter to Nip Sul Gim on May 17, and he knew the same to be false; and that he wrote the said letter alleged to contain the defamatory libel, irrespective of whether or not he knew it to be false.

"These are the four counts on which the prosecution seeks conviction of the accused," declared Mr. Lowe. "Every citizen has the right to protect his name and good reputation, and we will submit that the letters written by Mar Poy were defamatory libels."

Testimony was then given by Nip Sul Gim. This diminutive Chinese girl said that she had been born in Victoria and lived here with her parents at 149 Piquard Street. She had known the accused Mar Poy for several years, and had seen him write. She had received the first letter from Mar Poy, the communication being handed to her by her father.

Claims Mar Poy Wrote Letter

Witness told the court that she had read the letter, and that the letter was in Mar Poy's handwriting, which she knew. She had replied to the letter, and the accused had received her reply, she testified. Witness stated she had informed Mar Poy that he must not write such a letter to her, and she would be scolded by her mother and father.

Mr. Lowe inquired of witness whether or not the statements in the letter she received from Mar Poy were true.

"No," answered Nip Sul Gim.

Prosecution counsel asked the witness if she had replied to Mar Poy's letter, and the response was in the negative.

"What did you do after getting the second communication?" Mr. Lowe again queried.

"I went out and saw Mar Poy and scolded him for writing defamatory letters to me," witness replied.

Nip Sul Gim told the court that Mar Poy had told her that, if her father sued him and he had him deported to China, he, himself, would return to Victoria by way of America and would take her life. She also stated that the accused threatened to take her life if she refused to steal the alleged defamatory letters from her father that he had written.

Mr. Frank Higgins, K.C., was about to start cross-examination of witness Nip Sul Gim, when Mr. Justice McDonald adjourned the case until this morning at 10:30 o'clock, at which time defence counsel will be heard.

INDIAN FISHERMEN

Storm Off Queen Charlotte Island Last Week Thought to Have Taken
Toll of Five Natives

VANCOUVER, Oct. 12.—Four or five Indian fishermen were drowned in Hecate Strait, between the Queen Charlotte Islands and the Northern British Columbia mainland, during a severe storm last week, it is feared.

The seine fishing craft Kurta was last seen on October 7 off Rose Spit, the northeastern tip of the islands, according to word received here today, and vessels which have been searching adjacent waters since then have been unsuccessful in finding any trace of the vessel or her native crew.

Express Company
Manager Optimistic

VANCOUVER, Oct. 12.—The sale of our financial paper is always a barometer, more or less as to general conditions in the country, and we have advanced in this direction to no small extent as the sale of money orders and travelers' cheques is considerably increased over the same period of 1925, said Mr. R. Helme, superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Express Company for Alberta and British Columbia, in an interview here today.

"From an express standpoint," said Mr. Helme, "business generally throughout our division has been wonderfully satisfactory. Since the first of the year, we had a marked increase from the fruit district, both in car lots and less than car lots, while our business with the Orient is opening up, and we expect this to be considerably accelerated in the near future. We have now completely motorized at Vancouver, and our fleet of up-to-date trucks tends to be much quicker and efficient handling of express business."

Mr. Helme added that the expected that a very attractive rate for gift boxes of apples would shortly be provided for from Vancouver to points on railroads in Great Britain, as well as other European countries via the Panama Canal.

The marriage was solemnized at the Wesley United Church, when the Rev. Mr. Williams united in marriage Miss Myrtle Fisher, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Fisher, Vancouver Heights, and Mr. John R. Hill, son of Mrs. W. Hill, of Vancouver.

The bride, who was charmingly attired in a tailored suit of putty shade and wore a red fox fur and large picture hat, entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Edith O'Connell. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Fisher, in a white dress, wearing a frock of navy blue with grey squirrel fur and large grey hat to match, and carrying a beautiful bouquet of pink carnations and chrysanthemums. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Thomas Hill. The groom's gift to the bride was a leather club bag; to the bridesmaid, French ivory; to the organist, French ivory; and to the best man, a fountain pen. Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left on the boat for Nanaimo en route to the Sound where the honeymoon will be spent. The bride was given in marriage by her mother, who was lovely in her wedding dress of white silk crepe de Chine with overdress of cream lace. Her arm played was of pink chrysanthemums. Mr. Patrick Parr, of Brentwood, was best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the town home of Chief Justice and Mrs. Gordon Hunter, Belleville Street. The reception-rooms were beautifully decorated with Autumn foliage and great clusters of grapes. In the dining-room the table was centered with a handsome three-tier wedding cake, surrounded with white tulle and blossoms. To the bride the groom gave a gold bracelet; to the maid of honor a gold and sapphire bar pin; and to the best man gold cuff links. Mr. and Mrs. Samuelson left on the midnight boat for Vancouver and the Sound cities. The bride traveled in a grey French embroidered frock with wrap and hat to match.

VICTORIA ARTISTE RECEIVES OVATION

Mrs. Gertrude Huntley Green plays at Men's Musical Club Concert in Vancouver.

Gertrude Huntley Green, an associate artist at the concert given by the Men's Musical Club in Vancouver this week, succeeded in captivating a large audience at the Orpheum Theatre. The following is from the account written by a Vancouver critic:

"Gertrude Huntley Green, a British Columbia artist of international fame, captured her audience immediately with a very beautiful stage presence and an innate grace of movement. Her wonderfully relaxed method of execution left at her command a perfect flexibility and clear enunciation of the most exacting passages. This was particularly noticeable in the difficult 'Polonaise in F Sharp Minor' by Chopin, a number not often heard on a concert programme. Her ease of handling the scales in octaves, and strength in developing the martial theme, roused her audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

Skill and Technique
"Her opening numbers, 'Theme and Variations' (Schubert) and 'Avant-Ronde' (Hummel) were delicately treated, the fascinating rhythm of the latter being particularly attractive. A modern group, 'Old Vienna' and 'Waltz' (Paganini) by Godowsky, 'Prelude G Major' by Rachmaninoff, 'Serenade' (York Bowen) and 'Tria' (Albeniz) were especially well received. Flashes of the artist's wonderful personality seemed to show through the first two, while the unusual and difficult modulation of the Serenade was handled with skillful and easy technique.

Many Tributes
"Most stimulating was the 'Impromptu in A Flat' (Chopin) with the melody accentuated in the lower notes, and the descriptive 'Nocturne in G Major' (Chopin), was followed by the before mentioned Polonaise. The brilliant 'Rhapsody No. IV' by Liszt, brought to an end the artist's numbers on the printed programme, but she had to answer to several encores and recalls. Many beautiful floral offerings were graciously received by both the artist pianist and the accompanist of the club, Dorothy Haddon."

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

SHARKEY WINS FIGHT ON FOUL

Long-Time Aspirant for the Heavyweight Crown Is Out-fought All the Way in Brooklyn Ring

UNFAIR TACTICS FAIL TO HELP HARRY WILLS

Veteran Negro Fighter Disqualified by Referee in Thirteenth Round After Taking Lots of Punishment

BROOKLYN, Oct. 12.—Harry Wills tonight came unexpectedly to the turning of the road in his long pursuit for heavyweight honors. After a year's absence from the ring during which he pounded in vain on the throne-room door of Jack Dempsey, the thirty-six-year-old negro challenger, was disqualified in the thirteenth round of a fifteen-round match against Jack Sharkey, of Boston, for illegal use of the back-hand blow.

Wills was a hopelessly beaten man at the end. Though he conceded 26½ pounds to the negro, Sharkey carried the fight to Wills from the outset, outpacing, outboxing and even out-punching the man who for seven years was almost universally regarded as Dempsey's outstanding rival.

Close to 45,000 spectators in the Brooklyn National League park saw the passing of Wills from front rank challenges, less than a month after the passing of Dempsey himself. It was the first time Wills has met defeat at the hands of a white opponent in his fifteen years in the ring.

Decisive Victory
Although the finish was a disappointment, it did not affect the decisiveness of Sharkey's victory. Wills was a sorry spectacle as he was waved to his corner. His left eye was nearly closed, a deep rash bled profusely over his right eye and from cuts about the nose and mouth.

From the fourth round on he was battling defensively, hanging on desperately under a fire of Sharkey's battering blows.

Wills had been warned repeatedly by the gray-haired referee, Patsy Haley, for unfair tactics. Not only was he cautioned against use of the back-hand but against punching on the breakaways, holding and hitting and prolonging the periods of the clinches to save himself from the punishing blows Sharkey dealt about the head and body.

All these tactics figured in Haley's decision for disqualification. Wills drew across Sharkey's face in the clinch that provided the specific grounds for the verdict.

Wills, slow and lacking in aggressiveness as well as punching power after his long lay-off, also had his attack further spiked by Referee Haley's prompt work in the clinches. The negro's favorite method of hitting with his right while holding with his left was nullified for the most part by Haley's vigilance.

No Knockdowns
Sharkey failed to floor Wills at any time but he staggered the big negro several times with vicious overhead rights to the head, left uppercuts to the jaw and hooks to the body. The fourth round was the turning point, Sharkey's blows having telling effect for the first time. From then on Wills absorbed steady punishment, cuts about his eyes bled in the fifth and sixth, and he was an easy mark for Sharkey's punches. Sharkey leaping to attack with the viciousness of a terrier, had Wills apparently on the verge of a knockout in the tenth, eleventh and twelfth rounds.

The majority of ring-side critics conceded Wills only one round, the third, after registering the second as even. The third eleven including the forty-three seconds of the thirteenth, went to Sharkey by a decisive margin. Sharkey's victory was all the more sensational because he had not figured prominently for the first time as a heavyweight contender. A failed product of Birmingham, N.Y., Sharkey owed his chief claim to fame to triumphs over George Godfrey, Eddie Hoffman, King Solomon and Jim Maloney. Sharkey weighing 183 to Wills 214½, had twelve years of youth in his favor to offset the negro's advantages in height, weight and reach. Sharkey is only twenty-four years old, against Wills' thirty-six.

The Fight by Rounds
Round 1—Sharkey started hostilities with a right to the jaw. They clinched and Wills landed a light to the chin. Sharkey drove both hands to the body and forced Wills to the ropes. Sharkey poked a right to the ribs, Sharkey landed a left to the head. Sharkey sent both hands to the head and hooked a left to the ear. Wills showed little aggressiveness. They were snarling at the bell.

Round 2—Sharkey fired both hands to the head. Wills took a left to the body as they came in close. Sharkey complained that Wills was holding. Wills drove both fists to the body. Wills countered with his left to the head. The negro was boomed as he created Sharkey about the ring. The referee warned Wills for hitting in the breaks. Wills landed both hands to body.

Round 3—Wills shot a short right to the head and then took a right to the head as they mixed at a lively pace. Wills handled Sharkey easily in the clinches but took a right smash to the head as they broke away.

Glimpses of Some World's Series Baseball Heroes in Action

Hunter Meets Wolves in Bush

PRINCE RUPERT, Oct. 12.—While deer hunting in the hills at the head of Tuck's Inlet, George Wolfelsiegle ran into a pack of six timber wolves. He shot and killed four and wounded two, one of which, before it vanished in the bush, tried to attack him. The pelts averaged nine feet in length.

Wills jabbed with his left but failed to keep off Sharkey's repeated rushes. They were whaling away at each other with both fists when the bell sounded. A slight gash showed over Sharkey's eye.

Round 4—Sharkey opened a furious attack and staggered Wills with a series of sharp blows to the head as he drove the negro to the corner. Wills countered to the body but his blows lacked power and direction. Sharkey put over two hard blows to the head. Wills backed off and fought cautiously. Sharkey shot a right to the head at the bell.

At Close Range
Round 5—Sharkey swung a long right to the head as they battled at close range. Wills slapped both hands to the head and took a hard smash to the body. Sharkey rocked Wills with a long right to the head. The negro grinned, but seemed hurt. They wrestled about and the referee had difficulty prying them apart. Sharkey drove a vicious right to the nose. Wills hooked to the head.

Round 6—Sharkey danced and jabbed while Wills looked for an opening. Wills tied Sharkey up in the center. Sharkey drove a vicious right to the jaw and pushed Wills away on the break. They spent much time wrestling and mauling. Wills had to bleed badly after taking a powerful blow at close quarters just before the bell.

Round 7—Wills took a sharp left to the face. Blood showed from a cut under his right eye. Sharkey complained the negro was holding. Wills rubbed and then drove a vicious right to the negro's head. Sharkey was more than holding his own at fighting. Wills covered up and was bleeding badly after taking a powerful blow at close quarters just before the bell.

Round 8—Both connected with a right to the head. Wills' right eye was closing. Sharkey worked a left upper cut to the head as they clinched. A left to the face cut Harry's mouth. Wills missed four successive leads as Sharkey bobbed out of range. Sharkey landed several hard rights to the head. Wills was cut about the left eye as well as the right. They broke from a clinch at the bell.

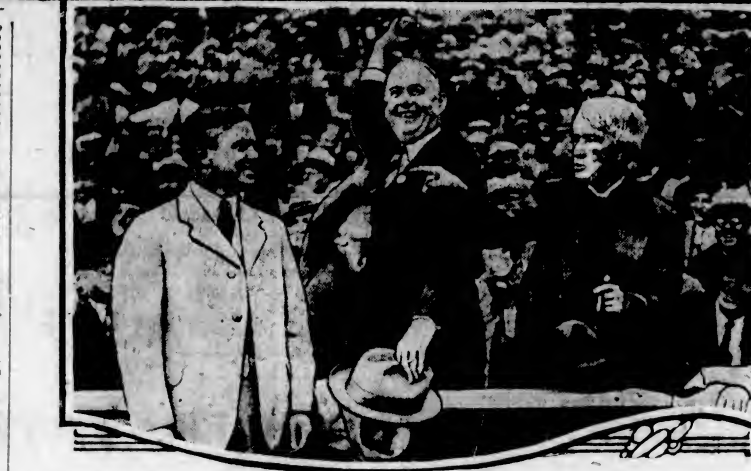

A Steady Battering
Round 9—Wills opened fire with both hands and drove Sharkey to the ropes. Sharkey fought his way back and had Wills blocking and clinching to avoid a heavy attack to the head. Jack sent rapid-fire shots to the head without a return and Wills was backing off. Wills took a steady battering as Sharkey worked both hands to the head and body. A right hook sent Wills to the ropes at the bell.

Round 10—Sharkey crashed an overhead right to the head that jarred the negro. A short left brought blood from Harry's nose. Sharkey hooked a terrific right to the head and pounded the negro to the stomach. Wills covered and seemed bewildered. Sharkey missed a left swing but came in to heat a tattoo to Harry's ribs. Wills was swinging wildly as the round ended.

Round 11—Wills got in a left but took a hard right to the head. Wills became shy as Sharkey looked for an opening. They sparred and clinched a great deal. Sharkey seemed a bit tired from his fast pace, but his punches had far more effectiveness than those of the negro. Wills was sent back by a right uppercut and nearly went through the ropes. Sharkey led with two hard rights to the head just before the bell.

Round 12—They rushed into a clinch and Wills hooked a right to the chin. Wills drove in two short jabs to head. Sharkey forced Wills to the ropes with a series of hard blows to the head and mark his right to the body. Sharkey twice leaped in with a left followed by a hard right smash to the body.

Foul Tactics
Round 13—Sharkey bounded off the floor at the top of the gong. He cuffed Harry to the head at close quarters. Wills battered Sharkey while holding with his left hand and also employed a backhand blow repeatedly. After failing to head the referee's warning and refusing to break, Referee Haley waved the negro to his corner. Wills was declared disqualified and Sharkey pronounced the winner after forty-six seconds of the round had elapsed.

HAINES pitches and hits to victory. The lower photo shows Mayor Victor J. Miller, of St. Louis, about to pitch out the first ball, officially opening the third game of the world's series at St. Louis, home of the Cardinals, Tuesday, October 5. At the right is Judge Landis, baseball czar. The Cardinals took the game, 4-3. The photo at top left shows Babe Ruth, who was slow-balled into submission by Pitter Jess Haines, at bat. But the "Habe" came to life next day with three homers. The photo on the top right shows Haines, of St. Louis, scoring after he had made the home run that brought fame to himself and victory for his team. Haines also pitched shut-out ball against the Yankees in more ways than one.

Rugby Now Flourishing on The High School Campus

Coach Harry Smith Working Hard to Develop Another Team of Thompson Cup Champions—Soccer, Hockey and Basketball Are All Going Strong

Great strides have been made in the various sporting activities at the Victoria High School since school opened at the beginning of September. Probably the game that is attracting the most attention just now is rugby, and Mr. Harry Smith is more than pleased with the material he has on hand, and figures he has another Provincial championship team in the making. Some thirty stalwart youths have been turning out regularly for the practices on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and are gradually being whipped into a first-class rugby fifteen that should be long in its determination to retain the Thompson Cup for another year at least.

Mr. Webster, and "Captain" Larry Kennedy are doing all in their power to assist Coach Smith in his enterprise, and that is "the spirit to win on any practice day giving some of the 'new recruits' a few delicate pointers on the art of playing rugby.

The three-quarter line has developed wonderfully this last month, while the back division, composed of last year's "old reliable" present a defence that will be hard to beat. As yet the forwards are a little slow in clearing the ball, but it is expected that within the next few practices this weakness will be remedied. There is one thing, however, the whole team possesses, and that is "the spirit to win and win cleanly." This is one advantage in favor of Victoria High School, and it will prove more than interesting to note how far the 1926 senior rugby team gets in its quest for Provincial titles.

The first test will come on the 30th of this month, when the University School will clash with the yellow and black at the High School grounds. This will give the V.H.S. plenty of time to smooth out some of their plays, and the match should prove a gruelling contest from start to finish.

Soccer Doing Well
Soccer is also going along with leaps and bounds, and it is expected that before long Coach Brandreth will turn out one of the strongest association football teams ever muscled under the colors of the High School. The boys are doing "their stuff" twice a week, and are able to hold their own in any company within the near future.

While all this is going on the girls are by no means standing around idle. Miss Betty Rice had a squad out nearly every night playing grass hockey, and by the way the girls are shaping up. V.H.S. seems headed to another Thompson Cup victory. It is some time now since the locals have won Provincial honors in this line of sport, and their past ambition this year seems to be to bring the silverware back to Victoria.

Basketball, one of the major sports, will get under way this afternoon. Mr. Campbell has called a meeting for 3:30 o'clock for all those interested in the hoop game, and it is expected some fifty boys will answer the first call. This year it is the intention of Coach Campbell to enter his senior representative team in the B Division of the City League, and also enter the Thompson Cup which they will defend. The photo on the top right shows Haines, of St. Louis, scoring after he had made the home run that brought fame to himself and victory for his team. Haines also pitched shut-out ball against the Yankees in more ways than one.

A Class League
Aside from this a class league will be staged among the various divisions of the school, so that every boy will have a chance to participate in this line of athletic sport. In all probability, a cup will be donated to the winning class.

Unfortunately, it has been decided not to form a senior girls hoop team this year, so that the girls will not miss from the school. The girls they won from Vancouver last season. This means the boys will have to get down to serious business and make sure of bringing the boys' title to the Victoria High School.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S GALA HAS BIG ENTRY

Crystal Garden Pool Will Be Scene of Interesting Events—Fancy Diving Exhibition

Under the auspices of the Victoria Amateur Swimming Club and with the sanction of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, the "Kiddies' Gala," which is being staged at the Crystal Garden on Friday promises to eclipse any event of its kind ever held here.

Events for boys and girls all the way from twelve to eighteen years of age have drawn a large entry list, and keen competition, it is expected, will prevail in all of the events. The meet is a school championship meet, and the youngsters have been training faithfully in the hopes of making world's records.

Fancy diving by Miss Lydia Fulcher, champion lady diver of Alberta, will add interest to an already lengthy programme. The evening's entertainment will be drawn to a close by dancing.

Sportive Punches

By the "Old Un"

Well, the unbelievable has come to pass. SUZANNE LENGLEN, who could never, no jamla, lose her amateur standing, and who jamla, no never, would visit those United States whose reporters told such stories about her and even dared to say that she would—and as a professional—has done it and is it.

This man PYLE, what did he know about tennis? What nonsense for him to think he would be able to induce Suzanne to come and play for American dollars and, even if he could what would be the use seeing she would have nobody else to play with her?

Well, he seems to have known quite a lot more about tennis and the ways of tennis stars and the stars they use for their own purposes than we gave him credit for.

He has not only signed on Suzanne but also the American man who was supposed to be the one who was due to de throne the great TILDEN. Not to mention that he has also engaged such a prominent lady athlete as MARY BROWNE.

And the tour has started. This means that there are four or five of the leading players of the tennis world who can never again be invited to play as AMATEURS FOR THEIR EXPENSES and help the gate receipts by so doing for the clubs inviting them.

And BILL TILDEN, he of the sphinx-like face who, as an amateur, has defied the authorities more than once and got away with it, had a front seat at their first exhibition in New York.

But we suppose the second-raters who are good enough to attract good gate money to third-rate tournaments will continue to be invited to take part in such and take the championships of this and that place which they would never have had connection with had the offer for their EXPENSES been too small.

So TUNNEY is not a ladies' man. Says he doesn't even know a girl he could take to a theatre, let alone marry.

He certainly seems to be different in every way from the ex-champion, doesn't he?

By the way we wonder why so many people pronounce Tunney as if it were spelt Tooney?

There was a prizefighter called Tooney. Who thought it exceedingly fooney.

That any young dame should be wanting his name.

As her own—not to mention his money.

Still we'll bet that after that story has got into print he'll have hundreds of girls ready to take him to the theatre if he'll go with them—or to the altar or registrar's office, p.d.

An American contemporary says that quite a number of golfers from the wrong (sic) side of the line made several trips this year to British Columbia, and comments, "Well, that's one way to forget your golf troubles." What can the dear man mean?

THREE SOCCER GAMES ON SATURDAY'S CARD

Victoria City Will Oppose St. Andrew's of Vancouver in P.C.L. Fixture at Athletic Park

After a short layoff due to injuries and the inability to procure playing fields the Victoria City soccer eleven, local Pacific Coast entry, will make their appearance for the benefit of local fans at the Royal Athletic Park on Saturday in a league fixture with St. Andrew's, of Vancouver, as their opponents.

The Victoria club is making a great uphill fight, one perhaps never equalled in this part of the globe, and after the dark clouds that were witnessed in the few weeks just past a bright tomorrow seems to greet the officials of this club in their endeavor to give the followers of the pigskin game better football.

To date the local eleven have played one game which they lost to St. Saviour's of Vancouver here some weeks ago. With new material lined up for Saturday they should make stiff opposition for the Malinaldens.

The Victoria City eleven will be selected from the following: Leeming, Tuckwell, Glancy, Robertson, Sinkinson, Thornt, Merritt, Cameron, Phillips, Ashley, Rodda, Rae, Merrifield and Playfair.

A workout of the Victoria City Club will be held at the Metropolis on Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Two games will be played in the local First Division Football League. Equilibrium will meet James Island at Beacon Hill, with Saunders as referee, and Victoria Wests and Saanich clash will provide the attraction at Central Park with Alcorn as referee of the whistle. The Dockers, who have yet to suffer defeat, are favorites for the Beacon Hill game, but the issue at Central Park should prove interesting. In the first meeting of the "Greenishirts" and the Thistles the latter won by the odd goal in three, which was scored on a penalty. The Wests have improved to a great extent since this match and on Saturday they will give the youngsters a merry battle.

SUZANNE TELLS THE REAL STORY

Mademoiselle Lenglen Gives Her Version of What Happened at Wimbledon Tennis Courts

HAD NO INTENTION OF SLIGHTING THE QUEEN

Chapter of Accidents Combined to Cause Disappointment of Spectators Waiting to See Her Play

By SUZANNE LENGLEN
(Copyright, 1926, in United States, Great Britain, and all other countries by North American Newspaper Alliance. Reproduction prohibited.)

Once upon a time, long before the knotty problem of gate receipts and rebellious amateurs had been dreamt of, there existed in England a tennis and cricket club whose clubhouse was at Wimbledon. The membership of this club was composed of some of the finest players in England, and the social status of these players, as well as of the non-playing members, was above and beyond reproach.

Yearly, at the beginning of Summer, they held their annual tournament, and those were the days when English players won the finals in these tournaments. A committee who adhered strictly and religiously to the rules of tournament play governed these events, justly and impartially. The gate receipts showed a handsome profit, which was devoted towards defraying the expenses of the club, and the players were all treated courteously and considerably and without any particular favoritism.

In fair competition, the famous players of all the world used to meet at this tournament, and the capturing of a Wimbledon championship was as much of a national triumph as are the Davis Cup matches of today. As the great game of tennis grew in popularity, so did the Wimbledon championships, until in England it became an affair of almost the same national importance as the Derby race.

The Gate's the Thing
Times changed. The Wimbledon club became prosperous and built the greatest tennis stadium in Europe, which they filled yearly during the tournament at prohibitive and fantastic prices. From the time that they realized the enormous value of the gate they virtually lost sight of everything else, and all other matters had importance in direct ratio to their value to the gate.

The management of the tournament suffered directly by this and a few players who were special drawing cards, and of whom I was one, began to receive special consideration.

The date and hours of our matches were always arranged to suit our convenience, and most of our winners were humored. In my own case there was probably some reason for this, as my physician has forbidden me to play since I had my first attack of rheumatism, which I had known this for four years and has always considerably refrained from making me play until about three o'clock in the afternoon. Commander George Hilliard, who had until this year a very important position in the tournament management, also knew this and he always made it his business to consult me about my position on the programme and treated me with kindness and courtesy.

Suffered Rheumatic Attack

This year the Wimbledon medals were distributed by Her Majesty the Queen of England. The players who were to receive the medals waited for them in a terrific sun, without any protection from the heat. I became overheated and immediately afterwards caught a very bad cold in my head, which settled as a rheumatic attack in my right arm and shoulder. Coupled with this calamity my old friend Commander Hilliard was removed from his post, and the person who was substituted evidently was unaware that I was accustomed to play at a certain hour, and he informed me that the hour of play for the next day before I left the club, and I was left to find that out by myself through the customary channels, the English newspapers.

The next day found my cold and my rheumatism a little worse. I stayed in bed that morning, trying to get the Wimbledon club on the phone. Whether it was due to the fact that the Wimbledon club was besieged by phone calls or the fact that telephone service in Europe is universally poor, I do not know, but there was no way for me to get them and no way for me to find out at what time I was scheduled to play that afternoon except through the newspapers. These latter informed me that I was to play a ladies' doubles match with my partner, Miss Didi Vlasto, at three o'clock—my customary hour for play. Nothing else could I find concerning myself, and so I tried the best I could to rest up from my wearying cold in bed.

At about half-past twelve Didi Vlasto called me up on the telephone and apprised me of the fact that she had learned that I was to play a ladies' singles after the doubles match. No mention was made of this in the newspapers and the information upset me, because I did not believe that I was well enough to play two matches that afternoon.

However, I hoped for the best, dressed and proceeded to Wimbledon in a leisurely fashion and arrived there in ample time to play the doubles match for which I was scheduled. I have been schooled by my father that it is discourteous to arrive late for a tennis match, and I always do my best to be there long before the time arranged.

Pandemonium at Stadium

"At Wimbledon pandemonium had broken loose. It seems that the singles match, that I was supposed to play after the doubles, had been scheduled for the opening match directly after lunch, about 1:30, an hour at which Commander Hilliard had never made me play. The crowds were growing impatient. Wimbledon committee officials were distractedly running around tearing large handfuls of hair from their heads, and the cry, 'Where is Suzanne?' echoed all over the club.

When I arrived the climax was reached. They all swooped down on me with 'Where have you been?' 'What is the matter?' 'Why didn't you play?' 'I had no right to come to the match, I had no right to be here, I had not been given my exact notice as to the time I was scheduled to play. Somebody evidently was to blame for this and, as they were unwilling to accept the blame themselves, they tried to shift it to me. Some of them lost their voices in the process and became downright peevish.

As for myself, remembering that I had left my bed to come and play so that these people could profit, and that I was now being roundly abused because they were being incompetent, I flew into an even greater rage as I have no vaunted reserve to lose, and told them in my hottest French and English exactly what I thought of them and their ad-hoc-headed incompetence.

They were going from bad to worse and I was really beginning to enjoy the battle when one of the officials had the indiscretion to remark that I had no right according to tournament rules, to come late to a match, and that it was my business to find out at what time I was scheduled to play.

"Certainly I have no right to come late," I answered. "According to the rules of tournament play you should have scratched (disqualified) me long ago, and if you were at all just about it you ought to do it now. As a matter of fact," I concluded, "I demand that you follow the rules and scratch me."

All that they all claimed down scratching me evidently was not what they wanted; they simply wanted to abuse me. The former involved, perhaps, great complications with the gate receipts.

I left them to think this over and went to my dressing-room to indulge in a few very necessary fainting spells. They became very apologetic at this and withdrew everything that they had said. Things became further complicated by the arrival of Her Majesty the Queen. They begged and beseeched me to go out on the court and not to keep the Queen waiting, but I could not do it. They had put me into such a nervous state that it was impossible for me to leave the dressing-room.

Jean Borotra was dispatched to Her Majesty to explain the situation, and the Queen graciously replied that she was very sorry to hear it and hoped that I would soon be well enough to play. I intended no affront to Her Majesty, for whom I have the greatest regard, and she understood that, in spite of what came out in the papers the day after.

I refused to go on the court that day and again asked them to scratch me from the tournament, but they would hear nothing of it. They told me the matter could be arranged and that I would play the next day instead.

I am sure that they were not thinking of the gate receipts that they might lose if I didn't play. They just wanted to be nice to me. Oh oui!

As a matter of fact, the next morning they sent around to my hotel for me and told me to go to the court to electrically make the rheumatism from my arm and laundier it into shape for that day's gate receipts—but to no avail. I was obliged to abandon all hope of finishing the tournament. It was impossible for me to raise my arm.

ANOTHER OIL STRIKE

IS MADE IN ALBERTA

CALGARY, Oct. 12.—At a depth of 3,811 feet the Illinois-Alberta well last Saturday struck a flow of naphtha gas estimated between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 cubic feet per day accompanied by a spray of naphtha estimated to produce about 100 barrels per day.
The naphtha in the new strike is almost like that of Royallite No. 4 which produces 18,000,000 cubic feet of wet gas per day and 500 barrels per day of seventy-three gravity naphtha.
The Illinois-Alberta naphtha is heavier, measures about fifty-eight degrees gravity, but is clear and colorless like the Royallite.

entire revue from the famous Silver Slipper night club of New York takes part, one of the most extraordinary displays of fur wraps ever seen on the screen, unusual sights in New York's subway—these are a few of the features that are seen this week at the Playhouse Theatre in First National's latest photoplay, "Sub-

In the case of the "Princess Nadia Ramiroff," the exotic Russian noblewoman so colorfully sketched by William J. Locke in "The Coming of Amos," which is playing this week on the screen at the Columbia Theatre. Uncouth, ignorant and grotesquely clumsy "Amos" first appears to the princess as "different," but she soon discovers that she reflects his incongruous love for her.

DOMINION After viewing the Of-THEATRE ficial Fight Pictures being presented at the Dominion Theatre this week by Tex Rickard, one finds it easy to believe the lurid tales of Dempsey's alleged philanderings. In comparison with Gene Tunney, he is more or less a pugilistic dwarf. Tunney, the white skinned, confident, the epitome of self-assurance and boxing skill, dominates the entire picture. Yet this wonderful and accurate picture version does not show either of the boxers in distress at any time. But it does show conclusively that Dempsey, trying everything in his repertoire, fell back discouraged, harried and beaten before the deliberate onslaught of a young man physically and mentally alert from going to gong. The other big picture attraction for this week at the Dominion Theatre is "The Campus Girl," a thrilling comedy drama of college life, starring Bebe Daniels.

COLISEUM This week large au-THEATRE diences are witnessing a magnificent and spontaneous the "Coliseum Company in the ever-popular screamingly funny farce,
"Are You a Mason?" The whole play brims with human and sidesplitting situations. Geo. Olsen, Jack Cassidy and Ed. Redmond excel themselves, and every member of the cast is to be congratulated on an excellent performance.

CAPITOL Vienna before the war.
THEATRE Bewitching, mad
Vienna, with its light-hearted gaiety, its capricious disregard of the conventions, its singing and its waltzes, forms the background of a charming, yet virile story. From royal palace, stately regal and solemn, to the wine gardens of old Vienna, where love and wine and song mingle gayly, the romance of a princess grows in "The Waltz Dream," a new U.F.A. film to be seen at the Capitol Theatre this week. A cast of extraordinary talent and appeal interpret the screen version of "The Waltz Dream," which is being distributed in the United States by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Galli-Curci Aroused
Simultaneous Affection
In World's Audiences

During Madame Galli-Curci's recent triumphant concert tour in Australia and New Zealand, on the celebration of her charming personality and marvellous voice made what might be termed a national appel. The people's response to her was tremendous and spontaneous, exactly as at her home in America.
Letters reached her by the hundred from old and young alike; little children, taken to her concerts, sent printed letters that doubtless proved to them a laborious job. For any individual to arouse such simultaneous, universal affection in a whole nation is a rare achievement in any century.
It is only bestowed on a beloved ruler, a victorious general or an idolized singer like Amelita Galli-Curci.
Her response to that affection was complete. Too busy singing for such was the demand to hear that concerts were given only a day apart, small leisure could be found for writing, though she answered personally an many letters as she could. On returning to her American home, Sul Monte in the Catskills, however, each day of her holiday before beginning a concert tour on which she will be heard at the Royal Victoria Theatre on October 27, the diva devoted a certain time daily to sending photographs and autographs to those new friends of hers in Australia and New Zealand.

CANADIAN LEGION ISSUES APPEAL

SEeks to SECURE GREATER IN-TEREST IN EX-SERVICE ORGANIZATIONS

Need Is Urgent for Securing Keen Business Brains, Clear Thinkers and Loyal Comrades

The Canadian Legion branch of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., has issued the following appeal in connection with their effort to create greater interest in the work of ex-service organizations in Victoria.

"From the time the first casualties returned to Victoria there has been an organized effort to band the ex-service men together in a bond of comradeship to preserve the fellowship of the trenches and render service to less fortunate comrades whose health and happiness have been impaired by wounds, sickness or inability to secure employment commensurate to their needs.

"Unfortunately the 'returned army' is far below the establishment of the C.E.F. The ranks are broken; thousands of comrades have answered a higher call, while thousands more stand aside unheeding the call for assistance, which is sounding ceaselessly. They are not wholly to blame for holding aloof. Organizations have made many mistakes in the past and the actions of associations and individuals have estranged many worthy comrades, causing the growth of the movement to be retarded.

"This condition has been practically eliminated, experience has separated the wrong from the right and opposing bodies is now a memory of the 'bad old days.' Co-operation is the keynote of today. Organizations are subservient to the worthy objects for which they exist and not the main object of consideration as they often used to be. Service is placed first and self last. The great desire is for efficiency, for the performance of duty in the best interests of country and comrades. Keen business brains, clear thinkers and loyal comrades in all walks of life are wanted to help with their presence and wise counsel. Just as cooperation of all branches of an army is essential to the success of the plan of campaign, so it is necessary for full co-operation to exist between all ex-service organizations.

"The call of duty is as insistent today as during the years of war.
Your cause and comrades need you.
It matters little which organization you join, but join one and help to do your 'bit.' If you decide to join the Canadian Legion branch you will receive a hearty welcome; if you prefer some other organization your membership will still advance the interests of your country and comrades."

LLOYD'S REPORT SHOWS 8,854 VESSELS HAVE 28,175,000 GROSS TONS

Figures at End of June, 1926, Are Highest Ever Recorded Under Register of Classification

The tonnage of merchant vessels at the end of June, 1926, amounted to 28,175,000 tons, the highest figure which has ever been recorded under Lloyd's Register of Classification, according to the annual report of Lloyd's Register of Shipping, which has just been received.

The aggregate of shipping which holds or is intended to hold the classification of Lloyd's Register amounts to 8,854 vessels of over 10,000 tons gross, according to the same report.

Canadians will note with particular interest that of the forty-five motorships of 8,000 tons or over fitted

$150 Postage Paid On Single Parcel Sent By Air Mail

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—What is believed to be a new record for high postage paid on a single parcel was established here when a package was sent from Philadelphia to San Francisco by air mail, carrying $150 in stamps.

Postal regulations prohibited local clerks divulging any description of the package, its contents, or recipient, but the package was nearly covered with cancelled $5 stamps. The air mail postage across the continent is $4 a pound.

Effect of Strike Not Shown

With Diesel engines, the two Canadian tankers, the Canadotte and the Montrolite, of the Imperial Oil Company fleet, each of 11,300 tons, rank third largest in the world, being only surpassed by the twin screw Grisholm, of 17,993, and the Amerikaland, of 15,355 tons.

The report predicts that while the stoppage due to the British miners' strike of the supply of materials essential to shipbuilding and engineering, consequent on the closing down of blast furnaces, steel works and forging establishments in the United Kingdom, occurred too late to make its effect felt to any substantial extent upon the society's operations during the year under review, the full effects would be shown when complete returns were made up for the current year.

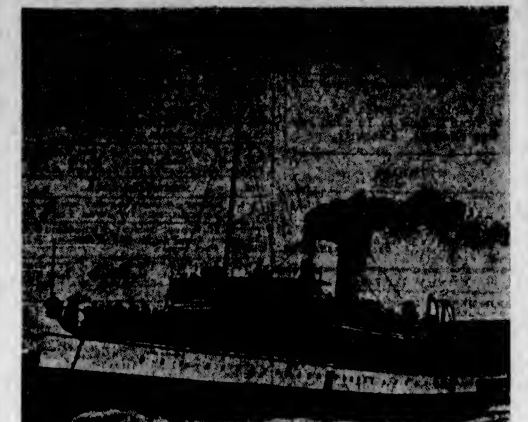

Notwithstanding adverse conditions, the society reported a slight increase over that of the preceding year as regards the tonnage of vessels under survey.

During the year plans for 341 new vessels of 1,089,350 tons gross were under review by Lloyd's committee. Although the figures are considerably under those of the preceding year, it is to be noted that of the total projected tonnage 68.3 per cent, amounting to 744,020 tons, is to be built in Great Britain and Ireland, and only 31.7 per cent, or 345,330 tons, abroad.

Princess Patricia Is Being Reconditioned

MOST extensive repairs are being carried out on the Princess Patricia, the most thorough in character since she came to this coast in 1912. It was stated yesterday. The reconditioning has not proceeded yet beyond the stage of taking essential parts to pieces, so that the duration of the overhaul cannot yet be estimated. It has been determined to make a thorough reconditioning of her at this time, having in view the importance of the Vancouver-Nanaimo run.

Cableship Dominia to Arrive at Esquimalt Sunday

THE world's largest cableship, Dominia, will arrive at Esquimalt Harbor on Sunday evening, on her maiden voyage, to lay the second Pacific cable which connects Bamfield with Panning Island, 3,625 miles, the longest cable in the world. She left Los Angeles yesterday according to advices received by Messrs. King Brothers.

Her cargo, which weighs 3,500 tons, is the most valuable ever carried by a cableship in the world's history.

The Dominia was built to the order of the Telegraph Construction & Maintenance Co., of Greenwich, by Swan Hunter and Wigham Richardson, of Newcastle-on-Tyne. She burns oil and is of about 8,000 gross tonnage, being 310 feet long and with a breadth of 59 feet.

The cable is coiled in four great tanks, each of which will accommodate nearly 10,000 cubic feet. The cable will be laid at the remarkable speed of nine miles an hour.

A thin wire of alloy would spiral around the copper centre of the heavy cable—a wire that if stretched straight would reach from the earth to the moon—makes possible the increased speed, which Mr. E. W. Smith, engineer for the Telegraph Construction & Maintenance Company, says, it is expected will be at least three times that of the present cable, and may attain an increased word rate of five times the maximum of today.

Japanese Vessel Has Large Consignment of Christmas Lily Bulbs

The N.Y.K. vessel Yokohama Maru, Captain Shibutani, will arrive off William Head Quarantine Station this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and is due to dock at Rithet's Outer Wharves shortly after 4 o'clock, according to wireless advices received by her agents here. For Victoria the vessel is carrying three stowage passengers and eighty-nine tons of freight, also fifty-nine sacks of mail. Sixteen bags will be dropped off here for air pilot Eddie Hubbard.

In the freight shipment carried by the Yokohama is a large consignment of Christmas lily bulbs for the local and Eastern Christmas market. This is the first shipment of the season, but many others will follow shortly.

HERRING OFFERS DOCK OPPORTUNITY

COLD STORAGE FOR MILD CURED VARIETIES AT OGDEN POINT SUGGESTED

Mr. J. L. Beckwith Points Out How Herring Is Moved to Mainland Past Port of Victoria

That there is a good opportunity for the development of a cold storage plant for handling mild cured herring from the Barkley Sound fisheries is the opinion of Mr. J. L. Beckwith, who has just returned from the West Coast.

He points out that during the herring season the small freighters are employed constantly moving out boxes of herring to the terminal ports on the Mainland, the herring going almost exclusively to the Orient market by steamers which have to pass Victoria on their way outwards. He instanced a case where a freighter, on entering Vancouver harbor, had to wait a considerable time for the discharge, he was informed by the captain, while the Ogdien Point docks were idle.

Barkley Sound is exempted from the proposed area in which herring fishing is to be permitted until December 21 to enable the fish reduction plants to continue to operate. The reason is that it is at that point that the herring is caught for the dried salt herring trade, while further up the West Coast there are no dry salt plants.

Mr. Beckwith understands that this phase of cold storage service is one which will engage the attention of the special industrial commissioner looking into the future of Victoria harbor development.

Proteilaus to Call On Way Out Tomorrow

The Blue Funnel liner Proteilaus will call tomorrow morning at about 8 o'clock outbound for the Far East. She will pick up a small shipment of freight at the outer wharves, and is expected to clear at about midday.

RUSSIA HAS MANY NOTABLES ON LIST

SIR FRANCIS AGLEN AND HON. J. B. PAYNE AMONG PASSENGERS TO SAIL

Canadian Pacific Liner Will Have 900 Travelers for Voyage to Far East

The ever growing trade connection between Canada and the Orient is strongly reflected in the passenger and freight bookings on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia, due to leave this port on Thursday afternoon for Japan and China.

The passenger figures amount to a fraction below the nine hundred mark, which is easily a record for the Empress of Russia on an outward voyage since pre-war days.

Cotton will once more figure prominently in a capacity cargo list, which includes in addition a full refrigerator consignment of vegetables, meat and butter.

There will be many prominent passengers on board, headed by Sir Francis Aglen, inspector-general of Customs with headquarters in Peking who is returning from furlough spent in the Old Country and Europe.

Hon. John B. Payne, president of the American Red Cross Society, will also be a passenger, accompanied by Frank Lyon, counsel in Washington on interstate commerce and shipping matters.

Other interesting travelers will include four Redemptorist Fathers from Montreal, under charge of Director General the Rev. Thomas Plint, en route to Annam, and eight Chinese mission sisters from Lennoxville, Quebec. In addition, Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, will make the trip East together with Dean Brock and Hiram Brown, of the University of British Columbia.

Shipping Notes

Mr. Charles J. Barry, traveling passenger agent of the New York Central Railroad, with headquarters at Beattie, was a visitor here on business yesterday. He left on the midnight boat for Vancouver.

The C.G.M.M. vessel Canadian Rover is expected to arrive here late tonight or early tomorrow morning, according to the latest advices.

The steamer has 100 tons of mixed cargo for discharge here, including a heavy shipment of dried fruit.

The Holland-American Line motorship Dredgik is due to arrive here next Wednesday from the United Kingdom. She is carrying about 240 tons of mixed cargo for Victoria, including woolen goods and hardware.

For her trip out the vessel will take on between sixty and seventy tons of freight here.

The Grant, Green and Blue, the last of the whalers to leave Victoria for the whaling grounds, arrived at the Consolidated Whaling Company's Point Ellice wharves yesterday.

STRESSES VALUE OF PERFECT WIFE

LONDON EDITOR CONSIDERS SHE IS DUE TO RECEIVE MORE THAN REQUEST

Man Delivered From Distillation by Her Companionship—Is Crown of Existence

It is strange that so many husbands allow their lawyers to dictate their wills by legal dictation, without flavoring their dry phrases with a little suggestion of human sentiment, says James Douglas, editor of The London Sunday Express.

I plead for more thanksgiving in our domestic wills. The perfect wife deserves a paucity as well as a request.

It is said that there is only one thing more tragic than not getting your heart's desire, namely, the getting of it. This may be true of many forms of ambition, such as the making of money and the pursuit of fame and the attainment of power. But I have never known a happily married man out of humor with his lot.

The truth is that the perfect wife is the crown and culmination of existence. The man who has been blessed by her companionship is delivered from every kind of disillusion and disenchantment. Fate cannot harm him, for no vicissitude can touch the secret and central citadel of his content. He knows that he has made good in the great business of life, and nothing can rob him of his victory. He may lose all his money and all his friends. He may even lose his health, but so long as he possesses the perfect wife he can bear with composure all the caprices of misfortune and all the freaks of mischance.

Marry Early

There are few men who do not embark on the quest of the perfect wife. She is the dream of their adolescence and the vision of their manhood. Happy is the young man who meets her on the threshold of his career, who marches by her side through all his battles. I am a firm believer in the early marriage, and the earlier the better. In youth the heart has not grown cold and the judgment has not been poisoned by self-regarding prudence. The unclouded imagination of a young man is a better guide in the maze of love than the worn and weary lamplight of a tired maturity. The perfect wife is the reward of youthful faith and courage and fidelity.

And what is the perfect wife? In the first place she is not necessarily a paragon of classical beauty. Comeliness and homeliness are far more important than a dazzling array of physical charms. The vast majority of perfect wives are not qualified for a place in the chorus or for a close-up on the screen. They are lovely without being endowed with a fatal beauty. They are homely without being hideous. They fascinate men by their character rather than by their facial physical symmetry.

Character Most Important

I go so far as to say that character is the chief characteristic of the perfect wife. The best husband cannot afford to carry through life the terrible burden of a wife with a weak and unstable character. In nine cases out of ten even a strong man requires the fortitude and staying power of an undaunted and indomitable wife, whose patient common sense and wise vigilance double his own good qualities and mitigate his bad ones. The perfect wife can convert a weak man into a strong man, an irresolute man into a master of decision, a foolish man into a wise one, an indolent man into a pattern of industry. The world seldom discovers these hidden miracles of wifehood, for the perfect wife never gives her man away, and never reveals the part she plays in his success. She is content to be the power behind the throne.

Seek Her Council

The combination of masculine judgment with feminine intuition is irresistible. I knew a great leader of industry who confided to me the fact that he never made a big deal or embarked on a large enterprise without consulting his wife. He confessed that he would rather trust her instinct than his own brain and his own ripe experience. Women are never as shrewd judges of character, and they are seldom wrong in their diagnosis. They know whether a man is trustworthy or not.

The perfect wife is a flatterer. She is a brave and unflinching critic, and her honest criticism is as valuable as her measured approbation. The husband who earns the respect as well as the love of his wife is a great man, even if he is a poor man working for a modest salary or for humble wages. The perfect wife teaches her husband the rare virtues of self-respect and self-discipline and self-control. There are few drunkards who vanquish the watchful devotion of the perfect wife, for she is capable of unwavering faith and unflinching hope. I know a man who drank deeply for twenty years, and in the end was saved by the heroism of his perfect wife.

Make Most of Her

Many a husband rebels violently against the guardianship of his good wife, hates her for her caustic remarks, loathes her for her pitiless candor, defies her warnings and entreaties, breaks her heart by his treacheries and betrayals, and after years of her loyalty owes her his salvation. The amazing thing is her capacity for forgiveness, her gift of magnanimous forgetfulness, and her unconquerable and unquenchable love. These miracles are not recorded in plays and novels. They are written in the sealed book of the human heart. The moral is that a husband should make the most of the perfect wife while she is alive and while she is able to enjoy the fruits of her devotion. That is the true romance of life, to keep the treasure of happiness bestowed by the perfect wife. There is nothing like it, and if it is once squandered it can never be replaced.

"Beau Geste"

A Great Mystery Story

By PERCIVAL CHRISTOPHER WREN

The three Geste brothers, John, Digby and Augustus, are inseparable in their youth. They live with their aunt, Lady Brandon, in England. Lady Brandon owns the "Blue Water," a valuable sapphire. One day, Lady Brandon, Augustus, Digby and John are together, and someone suggests a look at the precious gem. Lady Brandon brings it out. They were looking at it when the lights go out, and when they are brought back, the sapphire has disappeared. Everyone disclaims any knowledge of its disappearance. Lady Brandon gives the person who took it until the next day to replace it.

She turned and walked to the door. Before opening it, she faced us once again.

"Have you anything to say—Michael?" she asked.

"Leave the girls out of it—and Augustus," he replied.

"Have you anything to say, Digby?" "No, Aunt. Awful sorry, and all that," replied Digby, and I seemed to see his lips forming the words, "No, no. Gobble and go."

"John?" and she looked even more disdainful, I thought.

"No, Aunt—except that I agree with Michael. Very strongly," I answered.

"Augustus?" "It's a damned shame. . . blustered Augustus.

"Very helpful," Lady Brandon cut him short with cruel contempt.

"Claudia?" "No, Aunt."

"Isobel?" "No, Aunt," answered Isobel. "But please, please wait another day and . . ."

"And give the thief time to dispose of it, were you going to say?" interrupted Aunt Patricia.

"Then that is all, is it?" she asked. "No one has anything to say. Very well," and she went out, closing the door quietly behind her.

"I hate auntie and loathe picking oakum, don't you, chaps?" remarked Digby conversationally, as we stared at each other in utter consternation.

"You fool, filthy, utter cad!" spluttered Augustus, looking from Digby to me and then to Michael.

"Cut us in, Gus. Shut it," said Michael in a perfectly friendly voice, and added, "Run along and play if you can't be serious."

With me, John, and turning to the girls, said, "Do me a favor, Queen Claudia and Faithful Isobel."

"Of course," said Isobel.

"What is it?" asked Claudia.

"Put this wretched business out of both your minds, by means of my absolute assurance and solemn promise that it will be settled and cleared up today."

"How?" asked Claudia.

"Oh, Michael, dear!" said Isobel, and glanced at me.

"Never mind how," for the minute, Claudia, replied Michael. "Just believe and rest assured. Before you go to bed tonight everything will be as clear as crystal."

"Or as blue as sapphires," said Digby, and added, "By Jove! I've got an idea! A theory!"

"My dog Joss got alarmed at the sudden darkness, jumped on a chair to avoid the crash, wagged his tail to show faith and hope, knocked over the cover, reversed his engine, and smelt round to see what he'd done: found nothing and yawned in boredom—and inhaled the 'Blue Water.'"

"Perhaps he was thirsty and drank the 'Blue Water,'" amended Isobel.

"Both very sound theories, Isobel, said it if Joss had been in the room," said Michael. "Come, John."

I followed my brother out into the hall. He led the way to his room.

"Take a pew, Johnny. I would hold converse with thee on certain dark matters," he said as we entered.

Having locked the door, he put his tobacco-jar on the low table beside the low armchair in which I was sitting.

"You leave the carbon cake too long in your pipes," he said. "That's what cracks them. Unequal expansion of the carbon and the wood, I suppose. You ought to scrape it out once a month or so."

"Oh, I like a well-oiled pipe," I replied. "Nutties and coals."

"Ah, well. So long as you can afford to crack your pipes," he said lastly, and sat silent for a minute or two.

I was quite under his spell again, and had to keep whipping my fingers up into a state of resentment and disgust to maintain them in the condition that common justice demanded. If he were going to restore the sapphire that evening as he had hinted, why on earth couldn't he have done it just now? For the matter of that, why on earth couldn't he have returned it last night when he went to the drawing-room? Why had he ever denied taking the thing at all?

"Well, son, what about it?" he said suddenly.

"Yes, what about it, Beau?" I replied.

He looked at me quizzically. "What's the game, should you think, Johnny?" he asked.

"That's what I want to know," I answered. "It seems a damned silly one, anyhow."

"Quite," agreed Michael. "Quite very. Very quiet. And a little rough on the girls and our good Augustus."

"Exactly," said I. "And on Aunt Patricia."

An uncomfortable silence followed.

"Well," said Michael at length. "Oh, put it back, Beau," I implored. "God alone knows what you're playing at! Do you?"

Michael sat up and stared at me. "Oh! You say 'Put it back,' do you, John?" he said slowly and thoughtfully.

"I do," I replied. "Or look here, Beau. Aunt thinks a lot of you, and devilish little of me. It would be doing her a real kindness not to let her know it was you after all. Give it here, and I'll . . . I colored and felt a fool."

"Eric, or Little by Little. A Story of School Life. The Boy With the Marble Bow." murmured Michael, smiling. But his voice was very kind.

"This grows interesting, Johnny," he went on. "The Boy With the Marble Bow" now, will you take it to Aunt Patricia and say, 'Alone I did it. I cannot tell a lie. It is a far better thing I do.'"

"Those very words, Beau!" I grinned. "On condition you tell what the game was, and why you did such a damned silly thing."

"Thank God the wretched business was going to end—and yet, and yet, . . . I felt quite sure that Michael would not let me take the blame—such as I would have preferred that to the wretched feeling of Aunt Patricia's scorn and contempt. The more she liked him and approved him, the more would she dislike and despise him then. She might forbid him the house."

Michael rose.

"You really will?" he asked. "If I go and get it I'll tell you the whole straight to Aunt Patricia and say you pinched it for a lark?"

"Only too glad of the chance. Beau!" I answered. "To get the beastly business over and done with and forgotten—and the girls and Gus and Digby out of the silly mess."

"H'm," said Michael, sitting down. "You would, eh?"

"And might I ask you a question or two, John?" he went on.

"What were you doing with your hand on the glass cover when I put my hand on it last night?"

"Waiting to catch the one that was returning the 'Blue Water,' I replied. 'H'm! Why did you want to catch him?'"

"Because I had twice been accused of the fool trick—just because I was standing close to the table when the light failed."

"So you were, too. . . And what were you doing downstairs last night when I found you in the hall?"

"Looking for the key, Beau, as I told you," I answered.

At four o'clock this afternoon the ceremony attendant on the formal opening of the new Fairfield United Church will take place. The actual ceremony of the opening of the door will be performed by Mrs. D. Spencer, who will receive the key from the hands of the architect, Major K. R. Spurgeon. Invitations have been sent to clergy and representative laymen of all the United Churches in the city, and also to ministers of other denominations. Following the important formalities of these first rites, there will be supper in the schoolroom, served by the Ladies Aid, and a "great opening festival," which will stretch through the evening.

The celebrations connected with the evolution into the handsome new building will, moreover, extend over next Sunday, with the formal opening of the new schoolroom in the afternoon, and through subsequent days, as may be noted by the following programme:
